

Do you want to show immigrants and refugees that they have not been forgotten? Be a Spiritual Care Giver!

Training Dates:

RIM works with Homeland Security to offer chaplaincy services to immigrant detainees in Suffolk County House of Correction or to clients in the RIM office in Malden. This form of chaplaincy involves one-on-one active listening. Volunteers visit at least once a month in the evening and attend a monthly support meeting. There is a special need for volunteers with other language skills.

Participants in this comprehensive training focus on their personal development throughout the process. Training topics include active listening skills, anti-racism, trauma, spiritual resources, self-care, legal issues, personality development, and small group work. Spiritual Care Givers doing prison chaplaincy will also attend orientation in the House of Correction and the facility will require a background check.

Interested volunteers go through an application and interview process before starting training. RIM is an interfaith organization that welcomes people of different spiritual, language, and cultural backgrounds. RIM charges a fee of $25 per trainee for materials.

Applications are available on the RIM Web site: www.r-i-m.net or by calling RIM: 781-322-1011. Contact: Jennifer Guterman, Volunteer Coordinator
